WRITING YOUR FUTURE

To our policyholders:

“WE ARE HERE TO HELP OUR CUSTOMERS ACHIEVE FINANCIAL SECURITY. WE KNOW THAT WHEN WE SERVE YOU WELL, WE’RE HELPING YOU CREATE A SECURE FUTURE – A FUTURE STORY THAT IS YOURS TO WRITE AND IS UNIQUE TO YOU.”

DEANNA M. MULLIGAN

President and Chief Executive Officer

In 2016, we experienced historic shifts in the economy, technology, politics, demographics, and consumer behavior. We work and live in a time of continuous change and disruption. Millennials have become the largest age group in the United States, exceeding 80 million people, and their technology preferences are reshaping business models.<sup>1</sup> Consumer expectations are rapidly shifting with the rise of millennials, new markets are opening up, and bold new ways of working are being explored. By the end of 2017, over two billion mobile device users will engage in some form of mobile commerce transaction.<sup>2</sup> We are going through the most significant period of change since the Industrial Revolution.

In the face of these transformations, Guardian's mission remains the same. We are here to help our customers achieve financial security. We know that when we serve you well, we're helping you create a secure future – a future story that is yours to write and is unique to you.

We accomplish our mission in three ways. First, as a mutual company, owned by our whole life insurance policyholders, everything we do is aligned with the interests of our customers. Second, we filter every decision through the lens of our time-tested values: People Count; We Do the Right Thing; and We Hold Ourselves to Very High Standards. Third, we approach challenges with analytical insight, diligence, and resilience. At Guardian we choose to look at every challenge as an opportunity.

Guardian's 2016 results speak to how we are creating opportunities in challenging times. Our strong financial performance across both our operating income and growing capital base allowed us to declare a record-breaking dividend of $850 million to policyholders, and we have paid a dividend each year since 1868.

Our disciplined approach to financial management continues to earn us exemplary ratings from all four major ratings agencies.

We are not only growing financially – we are now serving more people how, when, and where they prefer. Throughout 2016, Guardian served over 26 million policyholders and customers. We have grown our business beyond life insurance, disability income insurance, and annuities to dental, vision, and supplemental health insurance to help greater numbers of people define their path toward financial well-being.

This year, we sold our 401(k) business and made the decision to embark on a long-term strategic marketing relationship so that we could continue to provide 401(k) products and services. To ensure that we meet customer expectations in our mobile-first society, Guardian launched a first-of-its-kind electronic policy service for employees purchasing disability income insurance through the workplace, and we are piloting capabilities that allow consumers to purchase more of our products online.

Guardian is laying the foundation for leveraging data and highly scalable cloud platforms to enable us to create new business models and understand risks in ways never before possible. We are excited to leverage innovative technology advancements to empower us with robust solutions to some of our most difficult business challenges.

Our goal is not only to serve more customers but to exceed their expectations. J.D. Power recognized our retirement contact center for the sixth consecutive year for providing “An Outstanding Customer Service Experience” for the live phone channel. Our disability insurance call center was the only insurance business in the industry to earn recognition from DALBAR.

Guardian continues to look for ways to support our 8,800 employees operating in more than 150 locations, and 2,750 financial representatives in 58 agencies nationwide. We received a perfect score on the Human Rights Campaign Foundation’s 2017 Corporate Equality Index, a testament to our commitment to diversity and inclusion.

We continue to focus on how our employees can make a difference in our communities. Our Money Management for Life<sup>SM</sup> financial literacy program expanded in 2016, and is now offered in over 10 community colleges. We are also focused on the link between financial education and workforce development by supporting programs that bridge the gap between corporations, governments, and educational institutions to help young people graduate with the skills required to succeed in today’s job market. I am proud of our work with the City of New York’s Center for Youth Employment and the Business-Higher Education Forum in bringing more job opportunities to young people so that we can help the millennial and younger generations thrive.

We have also maintained our focus on sustainability by celebrating the opening of our new campus in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, built under LEED Gold standards. Designed with the intent to harness natural light and conserve resources, our new location is a truly collaborative work environment that will serve us well for years to come.

2016 was about Guardian serving our customers by holding strong to our values and turning challenges into opportunities. In the midst of this period of historic change, I am confident that we will continue to seize the opportunities these changes bring and help to secure a future full of promise for us all.

Thank you for the trust you place in us and for being a customer of Guardian.

Sincerely,

Deanna M. Mulligan

Feranmi](http://www.guardianlife.com/Feranmi)

Dr. Feranmi Okanlami is on a mission to “disabuse disability” by proving that disabled does not mean unable.

As a new father, Stanford graduate, talented athlete, and promising physician in training at Yale, Feranmi Okanlami was seemingly an unstoppable force – until an accident changed the course of his life.

In the third year of his orthopedic surgery residency at Yale, Feranmi, then 28, jumped into a pool and broke his neck, injuring his spinal cord. He was instantly paralyzed from the chest down.

Feranmi fought through two post-accident surgeries and an intensive program of inpatient rehabilitation before, incredibly, managing to regain movement in his legs only a couple of months after the accident.

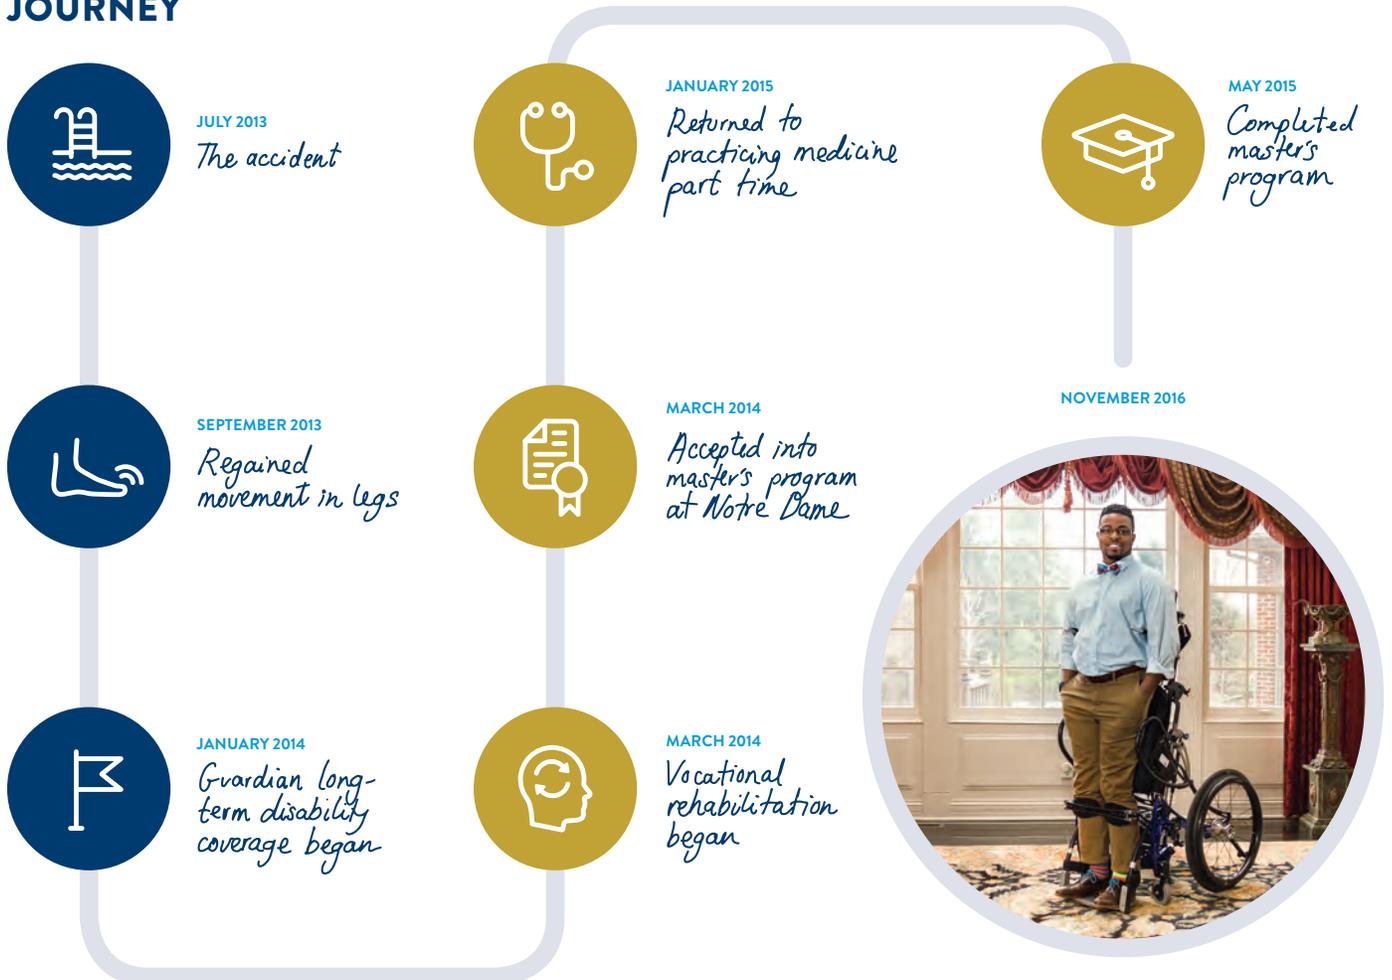

A combination of rehabilitation and determination enabled him to subsequently regain significant movement, and even walk with some assistance.

Like many young, healthy people, Feranmi knew little about long-term disability coverage. As he put it, “I was unable to return to work immediately after my injury, but I still had hospital bills, bills from surgery, bills from rehab, and a son to raise. At the time, I didn’t know much about long-term disability insurance, but having Guardian coverage through my residency at Yale provided me with a portion of my income to make sure that I had the ability to pay for those things.”

His proactivity, along with the support of his Guardian team – Case Manager Laura Nicholls and a vocational rehabilitation specialist – enabled Feranmi to excel in Guardian’s vocational rehabilitation program. Through this program, he completed a master’s degree at Notre Dame – opening up new opportunities despite a temporary hiatus in his medical career.

Having moved back home to South Bend, Indiana, Feranmi is now not only back in medicine (as a third-year family medicine resident at Memorial Hospital), but is also coaching a wheelchair basketball team and is involved in countless local community initiatives, proving that he is still just as unstoppable as ever.

JONATHON WAGNER'S STORY.

Jonathon](http://www.guardianlife.com/Jonathon)

Jonathon Wagner overlooking one of his favorite spots in Santa Cruz, where he owns a dental practice.

Recent events in Jonathon Wagner’s professional and personal life have served as a reminder of the importance of being well prepared and adaptable.

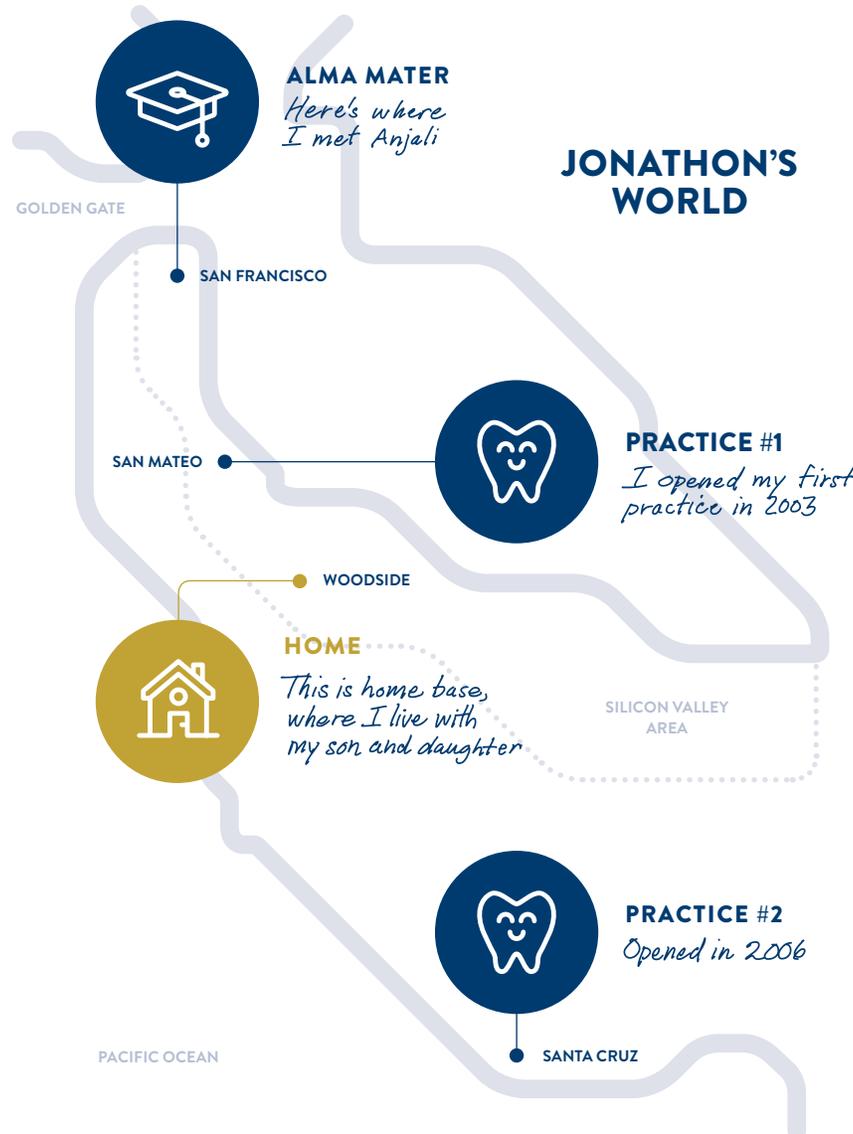

Jonathon met Anjali Singh, his longtime Guardian Financial Representative, while training at the University of the Pacific’s dental school in San Francisco. He has been practicing as a dentist for over 15 years, dividing his time between surgeries in San Mateo (near Silicon Valley) and Santa Cruz, California, and has worked with Anjali for the duration of his career.

“Anjali has had a really unique ability to understand me and my needs and be able to provide products and services that complement my life,” explains Jonathon.

Many years ago, Jonathon worked with Anjali to purchase a whole life insurance policy to protect himself and his family. Since then he’s used the cash value of his policy – money that can be used during one’s lifetime – to pursue other professional interests. While dentistry has always been Jonathon’s core career pursuit, his proximity to Silicon Valley sparked an interest in web-based technology. He launched two web-based ventures – in 2006 and 2010 – with his cash value.

Having gone to great lengths to protect his family over the years, but also being subject to unexpected life events, such as a recent divorce, Jonathon reflects, “Anjali and Guardian have been a big part of being able to financially and personally help me through those things.”

Jennifer Schoenig, Head of Business Management Services at Guardian, volunteering at a CareerCLUE event.

FACTS:

In New York City, as many as 186,000 young people – ages 16-24 – are not enrolled in school or working (The Community Service Society of New York, 2015).

The unemployment rate for those under 25 is twice that of the national average and is significantly worse for young people of color (Brookings Institution analysis on social mobility, March 2014).

Through its Workforce Development program, Guardian is working with a number of education and skills initiatives to help people achieve a more secure future.

Workforce Development encompasses education, training, skills development, career coaching, mentoring, internships, and apprenticeships.

By supporting communities in this way, Guardian hopes to open up new opportunities for people and help them to be better prepared for the future.

Workforce Development initiatives at Guardian are also an opportunity for employees to volunteer, mentor, and guide the development of young people. As Guardian employee Jennifer Schoenig explains, “I’ve been very fortunate in my life to have people who have given me great advice, often unsolicited, and sometimes that’s the advice that’s been most important in my life and my career. When a company encourages employees to give their time to do that, I think that that’s very rewarding.”

THE BUSINESS-HIGHER EDUCATION FORUM

Guardian works with the Business-Higher Education Forum to help bring data science courses to colleges and universities to prepare undergraduate students for data-intensive jobs in financial services, with a focus on underrepresented minorities.

NYC CENTER FOR YOUTH EMPLOYMENT

Guardian is a sponsor of the NYC Center for Youth Employment, through the Mayor’s Fund to Advance New York City. In addition to sponsoring interns through the program, Guardian was the founding supporter of CareerCLUE, a summer program to help high school students learn more about green jobs and the green economy.

MONEY MANAGEMENT FOR LIFE<sup>SM</sup> INTERNSHIP

Guardian’s Money Management for Life<sup>SM</sup> program has created alliances with community colleges across the country to offer a free, for-credit personal finance course. This program offered 30 paid internships through 2016, with plans to double its size by next year.

LADDERS FOR LEADERS

Ladders for Leaders, also run through the NYC Center for Youth Employment, is a paid, competitive summer program that provides professional internships to 16- to 21-year-olds with leading corporations, non-profit organizations, and government agencies in New York City. In 2016, Guardian hosted seven Ladders for Leaders interns.
